From the President:

Please Keep Your Dogs Leashed in Ridecamp

Keeping dogs leashed at all time in ride camp is always a hot topic – and filled with emotion. Us dog owners love these pets dearly.

But I would like to distill it down to one word – SAFETY. Dogs and horses can be unpredictable. Not every horse likes dogs, and some horses will attempt to injure or even kill them. Not every horse is used to dogs either, and a dog's presence in and around them without being contained could cause an accident. Riders have told me they have witnessed their horses suddenly going after a dog with a vengeance at home, and really fear what could possibly happen in camp with an unleashed dog in the presence of their equine. They do not want to see an injured dog.

And not all dogs are friendly to other dogs, and some get aggressive suddenly and without warning. Without a leash to pull them out of a fight or pull them back from a potential fight there is a big danger of bites to dogs and humans.

We also do not want dogs urinating on our crew items in the vet area, or on our tents, coolers and hay bales around camp. It takes only a second of in-attention by the owner for a dog to pee on something it should not. This is not hygienic.

Please be a good neighbor and leash your dogs. Thanks.

Theresa Meyer

RULE OF THE MONTH-

We are going to try something new and have information about a UMECRA rule in the coming newsletters.

Here's the first one:

GENERAL RULES

Rider Requirements

J. All riders and mounts must be physically present and accounted for, entered and vetted in at the start of the ride.

What does this rule mean? If a rider/mount are entered in the ride, vetted in but standing at their trailer not tacked up- are they following this rule? If a rider/mount check in with a timer before the start of a ride-are they following this rule?

The rule is being and can be interpreted in different ways. Some members feel that this rule means 'all riders need to check in with the timer before the start of the ride' while others feel the rule is broader and as long as a rider is entered in the ride and vetted in, they have satisfied this rule.

RIDE MANGERS:

If you want to have riders check in with the timer before the start of the ride, do not make the assumption that riders will automatically know that they need to do that. You should make an announcement at the ride meeting so it is clear to riders: ALL riders are required to check in with the timer before the start of their event. Let riders know where the timer will be located; it is the riders responsibility to report to the timer, not the timer trying to find the riders on his/her list! Inform riders that are going out on the trail later than the scheduled time that they need to announce themselves to the timer that he/she is going to go out on the trail late and how late!

RIDERS:

Please attend the ride meetings. This is where you learn where the timer is located and where you need to check in. (Among many other things)

Also remember, the timer may not be a regular rider, so remember to say your number and name and the event in which you are riding that day. If you plan to leave late, please tell the timer. If you have "issues" - a wardrobe or tack malfunction for example - that will cause you to leave more than 5 minutes late, try and send word to the timer that you are running late and if possible your estimated time of leaving. Please thank all our volunteers for their help with the ride.

More Musings From The Timer's Table Dr Wes Elford

I you've never spent time at the timer's table, may I suggest when you get a spare moment that you amble over. Carry you own chair with you because you'll get caught up in the highly intellectual and entertaining discussions that happen. You'll want to stay awhile and share your thoughts about whatever is being bantered about in the chit chat. Because everyone has good opinions worthy of sharing and we respect that at the the timer's table. Used to be that many of us spent time at Bob Mielke's trailer. The difference was that the conversations got quite opinionated and somewhat rowdy. Not that anyone cared because we all enjoyed each others company and once again respected each other's opinions. By design we try to stay away from politics--local, national, or international!

Lameness comes up fairly often and is one of the insidious problems the everyone is afraid of. Timer's table talk developed opinions on how to diagnose. Diagnostics isn't something that is done with any reliability at rides. The vets are too busy and it isn't part of their job. Everyone is frustrated by a lameness pull but even more frustrating is a horse that gets pulled for an obvious lameness at the vet check and then is sound the next morning after the ride. This is especially troublesome if the rider wanted to get the vet out or take the horse to a referral clinic to have a work-up of the issue. Many times we take the horse in and nothing can be detected on trot out or manipulation. One opinion rendered by a staunch timer's table frequenter was to "ride 'em till their head bobs"--meaning work the horse till the lameness is obvious to you at home then take the horse to the vet. It only stands to reason that the vet can't diagnose something if they can't see it. It's just like taking the truck and trailer to the mechanic because of an obvious noise made when you drive down the road-- but when you take it to the shop the mechanic can't hear the noise because the rig purs like nothing was ever wrong. No one likes to hurt our horses but if a lameness can be induced by a certain exercise then that might make it easier to figure out what's wrong.

The leaves were falling at the timer's table already! This prompted everyone to wonder where summer was going so fast. It seemed as though we were all still waiting until the hot weather gets here. It hasn't been really hot yet -- only a few days in the 90's so far. Kind'a comfy sleeping in the camper with the temps only in the high 50's and low 60's at night. Seems like there has been enough rain in most areas. Someone said that the corn was already drying down, turning brown and the kernels denting down around southern Illinois. Up in Wisconsin, however, there are some fields just now tasseling out--they went in really late because of the wet spring.

We were hearing the whirring of some Cicada which brought up the subject of the 17 year cicada. We didn't think that that's what we were hearing but there were some cicada exoskeletons on my car tires when I packed up to leave camp. The story was told of someone driving along hearing a loud whirring noise so loud that they thought that the truck was broke. They stopped and the sound kept going. They shut off their vehicle's motor and the sound still kept on. After rolling down the window, they realized the noise was coming from the 17 year cicadas that were whirring in the trees along the road.

This discussion prompted this author to Google the 17 year Cicada. I found that it is called the Magicicada and indeed hatches in numbers in the multi-millions in different parts of the country on different years. There are 17 and 13 year Magicicadas. The groupings are called Broods and each Brood has a number represented by a Roman numeral such as X or XII, or XIV. They are named also. The Brood XIV, The Great Southern Brood, was last hatched in 2011 in AL, AR, GA, IN, IL, KY, LA, MD, and MO and will be due to hatch again in 2024. They are a 13 year Magicicada.

So you can see just what can be learned in the musings at the Timer's table. There is a lot of intelligence spread pretty thick there and one can come away with a vast array of knowledge.

Another thing learned was how an extra scoop of butter put into a blueberry muffin recipe can make it so much more delicious. What was being handed out were blueberry muffins. They were delicious, as each had about a ½ cup of berries in it The baker had added an extra stick of real butter to the recipe making them extra delicious. Just then the LD's and the second loop of the 50's came in together so everyone quit talking and got real busy.

Why is the Frog of My Horse's Foot Falling Off?

By Britt Conklin, DVM

Aug 26, 2014 www.thehorse.com

This picture reflects a normal process in the horse's foot called exfoliation. The horse's sole and frog undergo a process whereby older cells "shed" over time, similar to skin.

• After a recent ride, I picked up my horse's hoof and found that the frog was hanging off. I've included a photograph I took of it. Why is my horse's frog falling off, and what should I do about it? Is he okay?

VIA E-MAIL

process in the horse's foot called exfoliation. Many people understand exfoliation in terms of human skin cells whereby dead cells are chemically or mechanically removed to improve the aesthetic look of the skin. The horse's sole and frog are similar in their cellular makeup to skin and therefore undergo a process whereby older cells "shed" over time.

The process involves the outward migration of epidermal cells that slowly die and accumulate keratin. Keratin holds the dead cells together into a structural, protective, tough covering like a Band-Aid. In most cases, exfoliation of the frog goes unnoticed or is seen when the farrier trims the feet. (It's also what the dog likes to eat after your farrier's visit!)

In certain environmental conditions, however, this structural covering will "shed" or exfoliate all at once or in a large piece. Much like a snake shedding its skin, the appearance can be very similar to the live anatomical structure and can therefore be concerning. If there is some retention of tissue in the normal process of exfoliation, as in this picture, then the process can be attenuated by trimming away the remaining dead keratinized frog.
